Johann Folta is a full-stack Javascript web developer at Resilient Coders. He has various experiences in countries throughout the world, such as having embarked on a 4-day motorcycle solo ride through Rwanda and entering North Korea as a curious tourist. Johann strives to make a positive impact in his surrounding communities and previous jobs include working hands-on with stroke patients and the elderly, mentoring adults with developmental disabilities, and providing exceptional customer service as an auto damage appraiser. He currently resides in Boston, Massachusetts with his lovely wife Maria, English bulldog named Snooky, and a baby on the way! Johann is determined to apply his fortitude and strong work ethic as a software engineer to solve the problems of the future and enable him to provide for his budding new family.
